

163573 - Ruling on mentioning Allah (saying “Bismillah”) when eating... And adding to it the question

I wanted to ask whether it is allowed to say "Bismillahir-Rahmanir-Raheem" instead of "Bismillah" before one eats. There was a discussion between a sister and me, and I said it is a Bid'ah, but the sister insisted that there is nothing wrong with that.

What is the right ruling on this issue?

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allah.

The phrase that is prescribed for mentioning Allah when eating is to say “Bismillah” (In the name of Allah), because of the report narrated by ‘Aa’ishah (may Allah be pleased with her), that the Prophet (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him) said: “When one of you eats some food, let him say Bismillah, and if he forgets to do so at the beginning, let him say Bismillah fi awwalihi wa aakhirihi (In the name of Allah at the beginning and end). Narrated by at-Tirmidhi, 1781; classed as saheeh by Shaykh al-Albaani (may Allah have mercy on him).

The scholars (may Allah have mercy on them) differed concerning saying Bismillah ir-Rahmaan ir-Raheem (in the name of Allah, the Most Gracious the Most Merciful). Most of the scholars are of the view that there is nothing wrong with this addition.

Shaykh al-Islam Ibn Taymiyah (may Allah have mercy on him) said: If one says when eating, Bismillah ir-Rahmaan ir-Raheem, that is good and more perfect. End quote from al-Fataawa al-Kubra, 5/480

It says in al-Mawsoo‘ah al-Fiqhiyyah, 8/92: The fuqaha’ are of the view that mentioning the name of Allah when beginning to eat is a Sunnah, and the phrase to be used is Bismillah or Bismillah ir-Rahmaan ir-Raheem. End quote.

An-Nawawi (may Allah have mercy on him) said: It is more important to note the phrase to be used when mentioning the name of Allah. ... The best is to say Bismillah ir-Rahmaan ir-Raheem, but if one says Bismillah, that is sufficient and fulfils the Sunnah. End quote from al-Adhkaar, 1/231

Al-Haafiz ibn Hajar (may Allah have mercy on him) followed that with his comment: I have not seen any particular evidence to support what he claims about it being better. End quote from Fath al-Baari.

Shaykh al-Albaani (may Allah have mercy on him) said: And I say: There is nothing better than his Sunnah (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him). The best of guidance is the guidance of Muhammad (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him) and if nothing is proven concerning mentioning the name of Allah when eating except to say "Bismillah," then it is not permissible to add anything to it, let alone suggest that the longer phrase is better than it, because saying such a thing is contrary to what is referred to in the hadeeth: "The best of guidance is the guidance of Muhammad (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him)." End quote from as-Silsilah as-Saheehah, 1/343

Based on this, it is better to limit it to saying Bismillah when starting to eat, and not add anything to it. But if one does add to it by saying Bismillah ir-Rahmaan ir-Raheem, there is nothing wrong with that according to the majority of scholars.

And Allah knows best.
