196742 - If a person changes his name, does he have to offer another 'aqeeqah on his own behalf?

the question

If I change my name, do I have to offer another 'aqeeqah giving my new name, so that the name that is recorded with Allah will be changed, or does the name that is recorded with Allah not change?

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allah.

The one who changes his name does not have to offer 'aqeeqah again on his own behalf.

It says in Majmoo' Fataawa Ibn 'Uthaymeen (10850): Changing one's name to something that is permissible is better if the name has an inappropriate meaning, as the Prophet (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him) changed some names to permissible meanings. That does not require repeating the 'aqeeqah, as some of the common folk think. End quote.
